Principal's Message

"When you see a worthy person endeavour to emulate him. When you see an unworthy person then examine your inner self."

"Don't judge a person by his looks, find out what he is like. Get to know him better. Try to understand what he is trying to tell you. Doing this may change your aspect towards him."

Those of you who have mastered your language lessons will have recognized that the two passages above are quotes from other people. Hopefully, all of you will find their thoughts at least worth considering. The first was written over two thousand years ago by the renown Chinese philosopher Confucius. The second is a mere decade old and reflects the thoughts of a junior high student from our city.

Isn't it interesting to find that two people from two very different cultures spanning a mere twenty-three centuries should think so differently about the importance of how we treat one another?

Our thanks are extended to those on the staff of the year book whose labors have captured the 1978-79 school year for us.

Especially for those of you who will be leaving this year remember.....

"With all its sham, drudgery, and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be careful. Strive to be happy."
